Chautauqua is a public educator through a pleasing medium---if you do not attend the Chautauqua you are negligent of your duty to your family and yourself---this is realized by the best people of all communities, and to willingly fail to take advantage of this great yearly educational and entertainment feature is obviously suggestive of one's being of that class whose members are careless of the higher ideals of life and of the benefits accruing thereby to the individual and the community

PAULINE FREDERICK REACHES NEW HEIGHTS IN 'MADAME X'

Film Version of Alexandre Bisson's
Famous Play Proves One of Most Powerful Ever Shown on The Screen

A mother's love for her son, who has believed her dead for twenty years, lifting her out of her character of a woman of the streets, causing her to commit a murder to save him from possible disgrace and making her willing to be convicted at her trial rather than tell the story that might save her, is the theme around which Pauline Frederick's new Goldenwyn play "Madame X," which comes to the Empress Theatre for two days, commencing next Wednesday, is written.

The picture is the film version of Alexandre Bisson's famous French play, one of the strongest and greatest dramas ever seen on the American stage.

Jacqueline Floriot (Pauline Frederick) has been driven from her home by her husband (William Courtleigh), a deputy attorney of Paris, because of his unjust suspicions regarding her relations with another man. She learns that her young son, four years old, is dangerously ill and returns to her home determined to see him. While her husband and Dr. Chesnel (Hardee Kirkland), are at the child's bedside she arrives at the house and is admitted by Rose (Maud Louise), Floriot's housekeeper.

Floriot comes from the child's room and encounters Jacqueline. He orders her out again. When she pleads to be permitted to see her son he tells her that the boy believes her dead. She leaves and tries to die in the river but is saved, only to begin a life in the streets.

Twenty years later Raymond Floriot (Caeson Ferguson), is admitted to the bar at Bordeaux and is engaged to Helene Valmorin (Corraan Kirkham), daughter of M. Valmorin (John Hohenvest), public prosecutor of Bordeaux.

At the same time Jacqueline, now a wreck of a woman, a drug user, cynical and hardened, sits in a cafe in Buenos Ayres to which place she has drifted, drinking absinthe. Laroque (Sidney Ainsworth), a French crook, offers to take her back to France and she goes as his companion. They land in Bordeaux and go to an inn.

Through all these years Jacqueline has been thinking of her son and her love for him is the only thing left of her early life. Her hope of seeing him once more before she dies has brought her back to France and she dreams of what he must be now as she sits in the room of the dingy hotel.

Parissard (Lionel Belmore), and Merival (Willard Louis), Paris blackmailers, have brought Laroque back to aid them in their schemes and they call on him at Bordeaux. He tells them that Jacqueline, while under the influence of drugs, has admitted that she had a son in Paris, that her husband was deputy attorney of Paris twenty years before, and that she brought him a fortune as her dowry. They determine to use Jacqueline in a scheme against Floriot and his son. Parissard sends Jacqueline a bottle of ether and instructs Laroque to watch her while she drinks and get all the information he can.

Jacqueline refuses to tell Laroque anything. He becomes angry and tells her of the plot and announces that he is going to find her husband anyway. Jacqueline has only hate for Floriot now, but she fears her son will suffer and when Laroque insists on carrying out the scheme she kills him with his own revolver. She is sent to prison and, determined now that her son shall never know who she is, she refuses to give her name and is registered as "Madame X."

Raymond is assigned to defend her. She will not see him in prison and they come together first in the court room. Raymond's first case is a big event. M. Valmorin is the prosecutor. Judges and hear Raymond plead his case. Parissard and Merival are interested spectators.

Her years of dissipation and suffering, long weeks in prison and the terrible mental anguish over the possibility of her identity becoming known and working harm to her son have brought Jacqueline to a pitiful state. Instinctively she is attracted to this young lawyer who is defending her and he is attracted to her, but knows not why. The case of the prosecution is completed, Jacqueline sitting all the time with bowed head and refusing to assist her lawyer. The prosecutor announces that he leaves the case to the counsel for the defense "Maitre Raymond Floriot."

Jacqueline hears the name. She looks at this young lawyer and glances up to the judge's bench where Floriot sits. She recognizes her husband then her son. She wants to take Raymond in her arms but controls herself and determines now that nothing can make her speak.

Through testimony given by Victor (Caeson Ferguson), porter at the hotel and eloquent pleading Raymond wins the acquittal of Jacqueline after Floriot, Noel and Rose have recognized her through developments of the trial. He also succeeds in getting Parissard and Merival arrested.

Raymond has made a powerful plea for this woman of the underworld in which unconsciously he accuses his own father, by dwelling on the thought that perhaps this woman was driven into the streets to begin the life that led to the murder by a husband who did not appreciate her. Floriot is terrified at this accusation from his son's lips.

When the verdict is returned Jacqueline does not want to live and protests her acquittal. She collapses and is carried to another room. Raymond goes with her, but leaves while Dr. Chesnel attends her. Then he is told this woman is and of the occurrences of twenty years before. Raymond rushes back to Jacqueline and kneeling before her calls her "mother." She is happy and takes him in her arms. He pleads for Floriot and she permits him to bring Floriot and Noel to her.

He goes after them. They come back together but the shock of the trial has been too much for Jacqueline. The terrible emotions aroused by finding her son and husband again under such circumstances working on the weakened body have killed her.

DARKEST AFRICA IN 1871 REPRODUCED ON SCREEN AS HISTORICAL "THRILLER"

A beautiful young girl with dusky, wavy tresses and excited dark eyes stood in a perilous position on the top round of a ladder—a ladder which was slipping dangerously against the side of a burning building.

She was a "go-get-er" newspaper reporter and was, in addition to covering the story of a big New York fire, executing a little rescue of her own.

A superb specimen of young American manhood was doing some aerial stunts between two skyscrapers which brought the hair straight up on the heads of hundreds of spectators.

A few weeks later these same two young people were fighting the perils and mysteries of the jungles of Africa—the Dark Continent of 1871.

Hunger maddened jungle beasts crouched, ready to spring on a moment's notice and devour their white victims.

Slave trains filled with their black victims yoked together in twos, unladen men, women and children. The Arab slavers drove them forth just the same as they did the animals of their caravans—brutally and unmercifully.

Secret Mission
His mission was three-fold — to study the mysterious octopus plant, to find the phantom white tribe of Africa, to locate his father lost years before on an African expedition.

Her mission was to run down and expose, by means of her pen, the corrupt slave trade of Africa.

Did they succeed? What were the perilous adventures they were forced to cope with? Did their love run smooth?

Answer these interesting questions yourself by attending the initial episode of Universal's big, vital chapter play, "With Stanley In Africa," which begins at the Empress Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

You can't afford to miss it. Its educational value is unsurpassed. Its romance is supreme.

George Walsh is the featured player of this serial and is capably supported by Louise Lorraine. Other members of the cast are Charles Mason, William Welch and Gordon Sackville. Edward Kull directed and George H. Plympton wrote the story and continuity from history.

"20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" JULES VERNE'S CELEBRATED BOOK

Photographs taken under the sea showing film actors descending to the floor of the ocean from the famous submarine of Jules Verne's masterpiece of fiction "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" are but a few of the many startling scenes which come to The Empress Theatre Monday and Tuesday. The making of this picture required the services of 2,000 actors and two years work a part of which was done on the bottom of the ocean near the "Mysterious Island" spoken of by the master of thrilling fiction. Captain Nemo and his submarine Nautilus, have been visualized in this great picture and the story which has enthralled the reading public for the last fifty years, is presented in a vivid way.

"SHATTERED DREAMS"

Miss du Pont, coming to the Empress Theatre next Friday and Saturday in "Shattered Dreams," is wearing some new frocks worthy of more than honorable mention.

A crisp black taffeta frock is especially becoming to the star's blonde beauty. The skirt is full and extends out far on either hip, while the bodice is rather snug fitting with a square cut neck and short, very puffy sleeves. Small silk covered buttons are sewed very close together down the back of the waist, while the bottom of the blouse is cut on the bias and forms a girdle of many folds which crosses in the back and fastens at the left side just under the arm. Black taffeta rosettes, about the size of a dollar with bright green centers decorate the hip line, being placed about four inches apart clear around the hips. From these rosettes hang strips of the black silk lined with green.

A bright green feather hat, a three-quarter chain of jade beads, black satin pumps and chiffon hose complete an outfit which is stunning in its simplicity.

A dark blue duvetyne coat is most attractive also. The upper part of the wrap is long waisted and very blousy, while the skirt is of medium length and decidedly tight. The collar is rolled and made of tan, blue and brown checked angora and has deep fringe on the ends. A narrow duvetyne belt is partly visible under the baggy back, and crosses in the front holding down the narrow rolled collar which extends beyond the waist in the front. A dark blue duvetyne turban and chic veil blends in with the general effect, while brown kid pumps make it decidedly a wrap for street wear.

"SHATTERED DREAMS"

You'll see Miss du Pont at the Empress Theatre next Friday and Saturday in the midst of a bloodthirsty looking bunch of Apaches in her latest Universal starring picture, "Shattered Dreams."

You'll also see Herbert Hayes, lead-nig man par excellence, as the most vicious of the underworld Parisians. "Shattered Dreams" is the story of a young sculptress, studying her art in the Latin quarter and ambitious to get ahead—but a little too beautiful to have an easy time of it.

The dress of the Apache is something to be marvelled at—a costume primitive in its significance, weirdly striking in its appearance.

The true denizen of subterranean Paris wears a short black velvet jacket with big patch pockets, and underneath, a white shirt. At all times he wears a silk handkerchief about his neck, for there is a certain fear among these people that they will catch cold—and no wonder, considering how damp and sunless their haunts are, two or three stories under the ground. The handkerchief is black, and so is the jacket and their long, velvet peg-top trousers, and silk girdle about their waists.

Soft black patent leather pumps are worn by the Apache, thin soles and soft heeled, for running purposes. The trousers just meet the shoes and fit closely about the calves and ankles.

Two weapons guarantee him instant protection. One is a thing that looks like a simple wrist protector, but through it fine, sharp points protrude when it is pressed. That's for the cop who grabs him by the wrist. And up his right sleeve, handle down, is a knife. By a magician's twist of the wrist it is in his hand, uplifted—and woe be unto his assailant!

JULES VERNE

Jules Verne's greatest novel "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" has been dramatized for the screen and will be presented at the Empress on Monday and Tuesday.

There is strong opposition in Washington to the Anti-lynching Bill, by which it would be made illegal to kill people indiscriminately. There is strong opposition from the South. Presumably the lynchings will go on as usual.

A Parasite Preying Upon Grasshoppers

A parasite, which apparently has for its sole aim in life the destruction of the grasshopper, has made its appearance and in large numbers. On Tuesday of this week Grasshopper Inspector Barr, accompanied by H. Mackintosh, inspected a portion of the district lying north of the Old Man River and found to their very great satisfaction that many of the adult grasshoppers are being preyed upon by a very minute red parasite, or mite which makes its attack upon the unprotected back of the grasshopper it selects as its victim. A large number of full-grown grasshoppers were found. Many were dead but a large number were seen to be in the last stages of exhaustion.

Spreading out the wings of the insects so affected revealed the fact that a number of holes had been bored in their backs by the mites, but having no magnifying glass along with them this supposition could not be definitely proven. On some of the hoppers examined the bodies were covered with the mites, while on others but few were noticed. Whether the eggs of the insects found to be preying upon the hoppers are deposited in the cavities formed in the backs of the hoppers or whether the life fluid of the insect is drawn out through these openings is not as yet known. Samples of the grasshoppers, both living and dead, have been forwarded to the proper authorities at Edmonton and the result of their examination is being anxiously awaited here. The news that such an insect has made its appearance, and in such large numbers, will be the very best of news to farmers who for many weeks past have waged such relentless warfare upon an insect so destructive and in the campaign carried on for its extermination so many thousands of dollars have been spent.

Travel widens the mind and also the gap in the pocket book.

An Attractive Display

C. J. Reach's garden is seen at its best in the early hours of the morning, before the sun has dissipated the dew which at that hour lies in pearly drops within the heart of each flowering shrub. This garden might almost be called an old-world garden, as many of the flowers within are those we have been familiar with since early childhood. The poppy, the carnation, the English stock, hollyhock, morning glory and many others flourishing grandly, while the humble but aspiring sun-flower holds up its yellow head regally amongst its more arrogant companions. There is noticed what one might describe as a riot of color within the confined space, the blooms of yellow, blue and brown blending into one harmonious whole. A trailing vine clings tenderly to the comfortable residence. A few well-tended trees loom up prominently, giving just the proper touch of verdure necessary to be seen to the best advantage. Thirty years ago Mr. Reach began to prepare the soil, grubbing out the stones and loosening up the earth which even then he claimed was as rich in plant food as any to be found. Summer after summer an improvement for the better became noticeable until now, instead of the old-remembered sun-baked gravel bar is to be seen one of the most attractive gardens in town. There are many other delightful grounds to be seen in the neighborhood—beautifully kept lawns, rivaling those to be seen in eastern parts, carefully tended flower and vegetable gardens and one or two splendid hedges of currant. No use saying these things can not be grown in Macleod. A half hour's stroll over the townsite will soon disabuse one of that idea.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Russell are holidaying at Cranbrook, B.C., having left Macleod on Monday last to be absent several days. Master Douglas Russell is spending the holidays with friends at Fernie, B.C.

THE BRITISH DOOR OPENED TO OUR CATTLE.

Britain's embargo on Canadian store cattle is at last to be raised. Such, at all events, is the will of the British House of Commons, which on Monday passed a resolution expressing the opinion that the time has arrived for the unrestricted admission of our cattle. It is not a question of Government policy, for Ministers differ among themselves on the matter of and agree to leave it to the decision of the House.

It is almost exactly thirty years ago since Canadian cattle were brought under the embargo. Successive Canadian Governments have protested against the injustice of the British Government's thus branding our cattle as infected, thereby not only restricting their entrance to the United Kingdom but also prejudicing other markets against them. There was no stouter champion of Canada's rights in this connection than Sir Charles Tupper, who was our High Commissioner in London in the early stages of the controversy. Canada, however, has been more favored than other cattle-exporting countries, for while the British market has been kept completely closed to shipments of live cattle from all other lands, Canada has had the privilege of landing fat cattle on condition that they be slaughtered shortly after delivery at the port designated for their reception.

Five years ago our farmers were congratulating themselves upon the termination of the long dispute and upon the early re-opening of the British market to their store or stocker cattle. The discussion of the matter at the Imperial War Conference of 1917 was supposed to be ended by what was accepted as a promise of the then President of the Board of Agriculture to remove the embargo. In the proceedings of the Conference he is reported to have said: "I can assure you that so far as the English Board of Agriculture is concerned we are in favor of the removal of the embargo. We do not believe that there is now, or has been for a good many years past, the slightest ground to exclude Canadian cattle on the score of disease," and he accepted Hon. Robert Rogers' resolution to the effect that the embargo on Canadian cattle be removed as speedily as possible, a resolution that was passed by the Conference. Mr. Prothero, now Lord Ernle, was at that time President of the Board of Agriculture. He denies that his statement pledged the Government to remove the embargo. Several of the Ministers of to-day maintain that the Canadian members of the Conference and the Canadian people are justified in interpreting his statement of 1917 as a pledge, and in that view the House of Commons' vote confirms them.

Whether or not Lord Ernle's words at the Conference were meant to be an assurance that the embargo would be removed, they undoubtedly have been of service for bringing about its removal. Had no such pledge or seeming pledge been made, the House of Commons might not have voted as it did on Monday. The agricultural interests in England are recognized in Parliament and in the country. It is recognized by all parties that the British farmers' problems are problems of the most pressing national importance, and there is no part of the domestic business of the Government that has stronger claims upon the attention of Ministers than that of agricultural policy. It hardly needed the report of the Royal Commission to which this question of the embargo upon Canada's cattle was referred to vindicate the health of our animals. The idea that they were infected had ceased to be put forward before that Commission made its findings. Moreover, Britain has of late become less sensitive to criticism as to protective intent, especially since the enactment of the law relating to key industries.

We believe that the vote of the House of Commons on this embargo question was determined mainly by regard for Britain's honor. British members that might be expected to favor the interests of British cattle breeders declared that they felt bound to vote against the embargo because in their view Lord Ernle's statement at the Imperial War Conference of 1917 gave them no alternative. The present head of the Board of Agriculture, Sir A. Griffith-Boscawen, is strongly opposed to lifting the embargo. Will he bow to the order of the House and continue in office or prefer to resign?

WARSHIPS AND AIRPLANES.

Reports of recent British naval tests at which King George was present, are of special interest to all warship and airplane experts. The Admiralty is apparently conducting extensive experiments to ascertain what is the exact possibility of aerial attack on warship squadrons. The controversy respecting the relative merits of capital ships and aerial craft is keener than ever, and until it is settled, the permanent lines of naval policy cannot be laid down with any degree of assurance.

In the tests, it is reported, a group of airplanes, descending to 2,000 feet, were able to envelop the fleet in a smoke screen in a few minutes. In that screen they were able to drop a hail shower of imitation bombs on the ships. An old German ship and a discarded cruiser were used as targets for real explosives. It was found that a certain bomb, exploding on striking the water, was almost powerful enough to turn a Dreadnought over. A heavier charge could do the trick. Thus, even if direct hits were not made, big ships could be keeled over by close drops. The smoke screen is not satisfactory, however, except in fairly still atmosphere. Moreover, 2,000 feet is a low height, and planes would be subject to intense aircraft fire at that distance. If the defending fleet had airplane auxiliaries, the smoke screen might never be placed. The absolute necessity of aerial auxiliary service fully able to cover all warship fleet movements has been proven. The willingness of Britain to reduce her capital ship tonnage was no doubt partly owing to a belief that submarines and aircraft development had vitally affected the offensive value of the big fleet. The British Grand fleet was anchored behind safe barriers a large part of the four years of war. No airplane raids on it were successful, because of the long flight over the North Sea and return, but the naval staff was exceedingly careful about sending it for on idle movements. No other naval department is making the extensive tests now of fleet and aircraft co-relation that the Admiralty is, and what is being learned in these tests will be the subject of much curiosity.

MACLEOD FAIR.

The Editor of the Macleod Times.
Dear Sir,—Before the memory of the 1922 Macleod Fair is allowed to fade too much into the past, it might be well to comment on a few things.

Our fair for this year being over, we cannot do much more about it, than overlook the result of this year's work. What is of chief concern now is the future. If those appointed at the next general meeting of the Macleod Agricultural Society propose to hold a fair in 1923, there is a great deal that can be done to help make possible the success of next year's fair. And in this regard the following points seem to present themselves. Firstly, do the general people of our community, both town and country, wish to have a fair held. Secondly, is our fair doing, or can it be made to do sufficiently good work (for the time and effort of those responsible for it), to warrant its being held? Thirdly, if the first two questions are answered in the affirmative can the fair be made to pay its way, with a little over for reserve, taking one year with another?

The best way we have of judging out the answer to these queries is by attendance at the next general meeting of the Macleod Agricultural Society. There is a whole year in which to criticize the Fair and knock it, but there are only two or three days when as a community we can be of any real constructive help, and one of those days is the day of the Annual General Meeting. To my mind this far and away is the most important. We had in the Society in 1922 paid members. Is it too much to hope for half that number or being present at the next General Meeting? And of this number there is no very good reason why a good proportion of our town members could not put in an appearance? You business men who help the Society with your special prizes and advertising are every bit as interested in the success of the Fair as the other half of the community, and the one half cannot get on without the other, no matter in what way they are connected.

No doubt the next general meeting will be something similar to past ones, but there will very likely be some fresh points to be debated on, and besides the help and co-operation you can give, the time spent will probably prove interesting.

Under the system lately adopted in Alberta, our Fairs are graded into classes, and unless we maintain our standard and improve our Fair we are in danger of losing our present classification and be graded accordingly. But for the efforts of those in power this year our 1922 Fair would have been in a lower grade. This would mean the lowering of the prize money in some of the sections, and various other features.

It therefore behooves us at this time to see to it most especially, if the three queries mentioned above are answerable in the affirmative, that we are able to reasonably expect to put on a good Fair in 1923.

So let us all who are interested in the advancement of our district try to make it a point to attend the next general meeting of the Macleod Agricultural Society. Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper,
Yours truly,
JOHN F. CANNING.

CHAUTAUQUA THE PEOPLE'S LYCEUM

The Chautauqua is the one distinctively democratic institution which this country possesses. It is the natural outgrowth of the early lyceum or the town meeting, where great men of their day were wont to expound their vigorous philosophies, for the Chautauqua is just a town meeting of a new kind. In no other institution is so clearly epitomized the true demo-

SALVATION ARMY THOUGHTS

"Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus." Romans 3:24.

The Pressed Sea Fern's Message.

Oh, little sea fern, delicate and frail,
How came thy fronds to curl so gracefully?

Tell who the lace-like pattern for thee traced,
Which thy small, fairy fingers deftly wove;
Or where in ocean lie the soft, rich tints
Which unseen hands stamped on thy dainty plumes.

Thou say'st 'twas God who made thee, not thyself,
And that He formed thee after His design:
That thou did'st nought but use the gift He sent,
And rest, content that He supplied thy wants.

But tell me, little Fern, did'st thou not fear
When dark the storm-clouds rose above thy head;
When loud the tempest roared and shook the rock
On which was anchored thy most fragile form?

When angry billows belloyed all the night,
And broke in fury on thy weblike frame,
How could'st thou meet the crushing blows that dealt,
And still so perfect and unmoved remain?

Thinkst thou answerest me in softest tone,
"The one who made me is divine and wise,
Who, though He placed me on the ocean's brink,
First fitted me to meet both wind and tide."

Yet, many times thy home was wondrous fair,
When warm, soft wavelets kissed thy finger tips,
And laughing, echoed low the wild, strange soul,
With which Old Ocean ever greets the land;

When brightly from the azure sky, the sun
Upon thee smiled by day, and changed the sand
Beneath thy feet to glitt'ring, glitt'ring gold.
And through the lonely night, the silver moon
And patient stars watched o'er thee in thy sleep,

While Neptune moaned in tones subdued and low,
As murmuring 'gainst the Power that bade him rest.

If thou can't feel, how lonely must thou be,
Far distant from thine own fair ocean's home.
How thou must miss the gentle wave's caress,
The velvet sea-breeze blowing through thy hair,

The low, soft murmur of the changeable tides,
The pearly shells that sang their songs to thee!
How must the cruel weight which thou hast borne
Have bruised and wounded thy tender fronds!

"For this is the will of God, even your sanctification."—Thess. 4:3.

And yet, methinks, that even so, thou'd say,
"I knew not then, nor know I even now,
Why from my ocean home I have been torn,
Nor why such burdens have on me been laid;
But still, I trust that to some heart forlorn
A message I have been prepared to bear."

Ah, little Fern, that message comes to me,
Revealing to my heart these precious truths:
That He who made thy graceful form, can use
My life, if it is yielded to His plan.
And if 'tis shaped by His almighty hand,
T'will sweeter be than aught I could design.

And what though o'er my path there come at times
Dark clouds that threaten and obscure the light;
What though the wild winds howl, and lightnings flash?
Shall I not rest secure beneath His hand,
And know that ere the storm which I withstand
Has broken, He has seen my every need,
And strengthened me this tempest fierce to meet?

What if He draws me from the scenes I love,
And bids me labor, hidden far from sight?
Even so, I know the burdens I must bear
Will help to make another's burdens light,
And thus my life shall even sweeter be
If in some other life my joy I see.

Spirit of Chautauqua

I am the Spirit of Neighborliness. I am a social melting pot. I fuse aggregations of individuals into communities. I ignore and erase lines of division and bring together in happy fellowship members of all religious faith, all political parties, all social classes. In this fellowship they come to know each other—to know that the aspirations and ideas they cherish thought peculiar to the few are cherished by the many; that movements in which they thought only themselves interested are dear to the hearts of many who merely await the call of a leader before openly avowing their allegiance. I am Chautauqua.

Mr. Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture, in his speech on Tuesday evening, were weeds and their harmful effects on not only the crops, but on the country as a whole; the grasshopper plague which, had not concerted action been taken by all farmers in the province, would undoubtedly have meant the destruction of the 1922 crop; the wheat control board which will give to the producer of food supplies at least a fair price for all the wheat he has to sell. It was of the utmost importance that the people of the province should drop all sectional differences and work unitedly for the benefit of the province as a whole.

Fortnightly Crop Report

Issued by the Publicity Commissioner,
Government Building, Edmonton,
Saturday, July 29th, 1922.

The crop situation in Alberta has reached a condition where it is possible to make a fairly definite statement respecting the probable harvest.

Taking the province as a whole, the crop is uneven. On new breaking, and on well worked summer-fallow, yields of from 30 to 40 bushels of wheat are expected, in almost every part. On stubble ploughing, both fall and spring, the yields over three-quarters of the province will be light. The oat crop is a very short stand and the yield will not be as large as for several years past. A very considerable portion of the oat crop will be cut by mowers, for hay. In some districts this work has already commenced.

The area from Calgary south extending to the boundary, will have the heaviest crop since 1915, although on small portions of this area, particularly on the lighter soils, there will be some small crops. Some fields of wheat in this area give promise of 40 bushel yields and 30 bushels per acre will not be uncommon. The whole south-western part of the province has been favored with good rains. In addition to this a reserve of moisture was held over from last season, the fall rains being quite plentiful. The south-eastern part of the province has not been so favored. Fairly good rains have fallen but the crop is somewhat spotted.

In the whole of the south, a heavy yield of rye is anticipated and cutting of this crop is now practically completed. Most of the farmers have harvested part of the rye crop for hay. This will mean that the farmers of the south should not have to import much feed for the coming season.

The whole central and northern part of the province has been short of rain throughout the season. If rain were to come at the present time, it would materially improve the later sown green feed and hay.

Loss from grasshoppers has been very small throughout the infested territory owing to the energetic campaign waged against this pest. Poisoning will have to continue for some little time yet, particularly in the breeding grounds.

The department has commenced investigations respecting hay supply in the northern areas. A considerable amount of hay has already been located. The drying-up of sloughs will make it possible to secure hay on lands that have not been cut for some years past.

It is somewhat early yet to make a detailed statement regarding average yields for the province. If rains were to come at the present time, during the filling period, it would very materially improve the situation.

MUMMY OF INCA CHIEF LURES CROWDS

Heated arguments may be heard any noon in front of a Fifth Ave., N.Y., window, where the crowd stands three deep and gazes on the gruesome mummy of an old chief—once a Cacique of the Incas—embalmed and rolled in his poncho and turban years before Pizarro's raiders traveled down the Andes!

His face is covered with a dull brown veil, and his eyesockets are marked with thin gold plates, so shaped that archaeologists say he is weeping. On his head is a brilliant spread of yellow feathers, and an elaborate turban woven of peacock blue and dull gold is intricately wound about his skull.

A PISCATORIAL LAY.

Among the flickering shadows
Which dot the green lake waves,
Beside the lovely island

Whose rocks the water laves,
Close to the waves we're fishing,
But never get a bite!

Where is that shoal of fishes
Our fishers fed last night?

The fish last night were biting,
So fast the bait ran out,
These fine, fat worms, so tempting,

Are good bait, without doubt!
And yet our feast for fishes
Brings none this morning near,

The ones uncaught avoid this spot—
At least they come not here!

Do fish sometimes by instinct,
Or by good fish sprites led,
Avoid a fatal fishing ground,

Where they left many dead?
Or are they such great rovers
That fishing fields afar

Their shoals are ever seeking,
Where other fishers are?

How'er that be they come and go,
They bite or cease to bite!
Sometimes they feast on worms at morn,

Sometimes at almost night!

Now here, now there, we catch a few
For tasty, human food,
We know not how or why they come,

Or what like fishes' mood!

'Tis hard to tell why mortal men,
And mortal maidens, too,
Are keen to hook these finny lives—

We only know 'tis true!
We know not why good, fishy food
Our human palates please;

But, since 'tis so, we surely know,
Fish for our prey we'll seize!

Fish, flesh and fowl are human food,
Still, as in ages past,
Will these remain man's lawful spoil,

While human life shall last?
This is a riddle others can read
In future ages to be!

My friends, and Christ's, ate fishy
food,
Therefore, fish, say I, for me!

Red Cross Notes

Not the least part of the service rendered to the community by the Alberta Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society is that undertaken in conjunction with the Disposals Committee of the Russian Famine Relief. By means of this service parcels of food and clothing may be made up in any part of the province and can be sent free of duty and distributed to relatives and friends in Russia through neutral agencies. The Red Cross Provincial Headquarters receive the parcels and mail them to England, the only charge being that of H. M. Mail Service between Canada and England.

This service is proving of great use to the foreign-born, and large numbers avail themselves of this assistance.

The "Road to Health" is the title of the window display at the Red Cross Provincial Office this week demonstrating what are the daily needs of the growing child.

The first need of the child is to have healthy and intelligent parents, the model of the mother shows her engaged in the household arts of cookery and laundry. The father is shown caring for the little one in the open air.

The road to health is via the daily morning tub, and illustrated pamphlets are shown giving the novice valuable hints on management. Seated at a round table are models of the boys and girls at meal-time, with the right kind of foods that make for growth. Stress is laid on the value of good, pure milk in the building up of the framework of the body. "No milk, no baby, no baby no nation," says one of the best authorities on children out of the fulness of knowledge and experience with well babes, sick babes, fat and thin babes, laughing and crying babes.

A clean bill of health for the whole family will result from a well balanced diet of cereals, fruit, vegetables, bread made of whole meal, and but very little meat.

The child's road to health leads by the pleasant paths of out-door play illustrated by models of swings, may-pole, see-saws, swimming-pool, sand pile, and all the delights of the open air in summer time. The main lesson for the young mother is that her child's health is a matter of intelligent care and knowledge of the best way, which is to keep on nature's lines following the simple way of sleep in abundance, fresh air all the time, loose, comfortable and sensible clothing and a sufficiency of wholesome food.

The Children's Hour should be an institution in every home, the value of the bed-time story, the lullaby, for the child must hear good music in his own home, all these simple forms will make the child grow up not only a healthy but a happy youngster.

The older child's needs are these and more. School conditions are of the most vital importance bright, well-ventilated class-rooms, with the light properly arranged to avoid eye-strain. Correct sitting posture at study times is shown by a little model desk with the student studying at the right position.

Children brought up on those lines will grow and attain to a vigorous and beautiful manhood and womanhood.

SCOTLAND AND HUMOR.

Stephen Leacock's Latest Book.

"So you're going to try to take humor up to Scotland," the most eminent author in England said to me. "Well, the Lord help you. You'd better take an axe with you to open their skulls; there is no other way." How this legend started I don't know, but I think it is because the English are jealous of the Scotch. They got into the Union with them in 1707 and they can't get out. The Scotch don't want home rule, or Swa Raj, or Dominion status, or anything; they just want the English. When they want money they go to London and make it; if they want literary fame they sell their books to the English; and to prevent any kind of political trouble they take care to keep the cabinet well filled with Scotchmen. The English for shame's sake can't get out of the Union, so they retaliate by saying that the Scotch have no sense of humor. But there's nothing in it. One has only to ask any of the theatrical people and they will tell you that the audiences in Glasgow and Edinburgh are the best in the British Isles—possess the best taste and the best ability to recognize what is really good.

The reason for this lies, I think, in the well-known fact that the Scotch are a truly educated people, not educated in the mere sense of having been made to go to school, but in the higher sense of having acquired an interest in books and a respect for learning. In England the higher classes alone possess this, the working class as a whole knew nothing of it. But in Scotland the attitude is universal. And the more I reflect upon the subject, the more I believe that what counts most in the appreciation of humor is not nationality, but the degree of education enjoyed by the individual concerned. I do not think that there is any doubt that educated people possess a far wider range of humor than the uneducated class.

In front of the City Hall we saw a foreigner waving a red flag and thought at first that we had fallen into the hands of the Bolsheviks; then that Toronto had gone broke and they were auctioning off the City Hall. Finally we saw that they were repairing the tracks, and the unkempt one was diverting traffic. Wondering what other meanings the red flag could have we asked a lady to name the first three things that came into her head when she heard the words "red flag." The answer was: a bull, blood and the Canadian Ensign. Try it on your friends.

LOCAL & PERSONAL

Miss Mildred Macleod, of Granum, spent the week end with friends in town.

Mrs. Kerr, of Calgary, is visiting with Mrs. Milburn, of Macleod, this week.

Miss Jennie Martin and Miss Jones, of the Hudson's Bay Staff, Lethbridge, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Martin.

J. M. Cunningham, who represents the Redmond Co., Ltd., Winnipeg, was the guest last Monday of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Cunningham.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Gilroy and daughters Gladys and Betty have left for a holiday in Vancouver, Tacoma and other coast cities.

The sale of home cooking held on the 29th July by the Great War Next of Kin Association was most successful, approximately $50 being collected as a result of the sale.

Friday of last week was tag day for the War Memorial, a number of energetic ladies seeing that everyone wore one of the badges on that day. Thanks to their efforts the tidy sum of $112.88 was realized.

The Blaimore murder case, which promises by the preliminary evidence taken, to be of a most sensational nature and the trial of which was to have been proceeded with yesterday, has been postponed.

A sign post pointing the way to strangers heading west and north has been erected on the hill leading to the power house. Such information is of great value to tourists travelling through the district who appreciate very much the service rendered.

Messrs. J. Sutherland, H.C. Winter, Bob Hamilton and others left yesterday for the North Fork on a fishing expedition, and as they intend to be absent a week in the vicinity of the Gap, where big fish abound, the town should be well supplied with fish upon their return.

The building placed just east of the power house for the use of tourists is proving quite a boon, containing as it does a stove, light, water and the necessary utensils for cooking up a meal. Seldom a night passes but tourists may be seen encamped in the vicinity, taking advantage of the utilities provided by the town.

Work is being pushed on the United Irrigation ditch and five schedules will be finished next week if all goes well. It is hoped and confidently believed that the water will be turned into the ditch this fall, long enough at least to fill up water holes for the winter use of stock. There will be one more letting of contracts which, when finished, will complete the ditch. The help problem is a grave one, however, with harvest upon us.

D. C. Scott, deputy minister of Indian Affairs, and Commissioner Graham, who were here last week and who were shown over the Blood Reserve by Agent Faunt, were highly pleased with crop and feed prospects on that reserve. The grain is of splendid height and as the heads are well filled the yield is likely to surprise not only the general public but the Indian owners themselves. The manner in which the affairs of the tribe are being carried on was highly satisfactory to both officials.

On Saturday morning, August 5th, as John A. Hewson, a farmer living twelve miles south and east of Macleod, was cutting some grain with a binder, driving four horses, he stopped to make some changes, the horses started to run away with the machine and dragged Mr. Hewson about sixty yards, where they crossed a road which allowed the machine to pass over his body, leaving him clear of the machine, but unable to help himself. His son saw him from the house and ran to his assistance, binding the wound and placing him in a comfortable position, then ran to the house and phoned for Dr. Kennedy, who took Mr. Hewson to the house and, dressing his wounds, left him as comfortable as could be expected. His collarbone was broken, and several bruises and cuts, with many scratches, generally used up, but was resting well.

on Monday evening when Mrs. Hewson was called on.—Lethbridge Herald

Serious forest fires are raging in the vicinity of Kootenay Lake.

Miss Florence Miles, of Lethbridge, was the guest of Miss Olive Young during the fair.

Miss Betty Stanton of Lundbreck, is spending a week in Macleod, the guest of Miss V. Kirk.

Mr. R. F. Barnes left on Saturday last for the coast, where he will visit with his parents during the next three or four weeks.

Miss Queenie Williams has just returned to her home in Bellevue after spending a few days with Miss Lillian Becher in Macleod.

The War Memorial which has been erected in the Court House Square, will be unveiled with befitting ceremonies on Labor Day, September 4th.

Miss Lillian Becher returned from her sister's, Mrs. J. B. Wilson, of Blaimore, over a week ago, after having a lovely holiday and enjoying a trip to Fernie.

Elmslie Gardiner, of Marlborough, is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. E. Gardiner. Mr. Gardiner is en route to California where he will fill a position as instructor in chemistry at Berkeley University.

Constable Reginald Reid, of the R. C. M. Police, Lethbridge, but formerly a member of the Macleod baseball team, was in town last week and took part in the baseball competition at the fair.

Those of our townspeople who wish to have their names added to the list of subscribers to the Memorial Monument Fund are requested to leave their contributions with the manager of the Union Bank.

Lawrence Hicks, of Drumheller, is visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hicks, of Macleod. The Drumheller mines being still closed down has made that town a very dull place to live in during the past few weeks.

Mr. J. W. McDonald, K.C., had the misfortune last week to lose a very valuable cow, her death being caused, it is said, by the animal having eaten from a bag of poisoned grasshopper bait, which had been dropped from a passing wagon and left lying by the roadside.

A. F. Grady's vegetable garden is a striking example of the excellent gardens to be seen in Macleod this year—and we can vouch for the quality of the products in potatoes and greenstuffs, having personally sampled liberal portions of them by reason of Mr. Grady's generosity.

A harvest hand from Louisiana was in town Friday. He appeared to be peeved on account of harvesting operations not having started as yet in this part. The railway rate for harvest hands traveling over the American lines is 2½ cents per mile, on the Canadian side, however, it is but 1 cent per mile.

Recipe for Home Brew—Chase a Macleod bull-frog for three miles and gather the hops. To the hops add 3 gallons of tan bark, 3 pints of shellac and 6 bars of home made soap. Boil the mixture for 36 hours and strain through an anarchist banner to keep it from working. Add one grasshopper to give it the kick. A drink or two of this brew and a man begins to break the crockery in the house.

Macleod people who drove out to the Granum celebration held Wednesday afternoon, claim to have enjoyed themselves very much. The events advertised were all good and were carried out to the letter. The ball game between Staveland and Macleod was called off owing to high wind and failing light, the Staveland team having a little the best of it at the time. The afternoon's sports wound up with a dance.

The Dominion Steel Bridge Company of Montreal are receiving heavy shipments of steel for the bridges and other structures on the line of the Lethbridge Northern. Nine hundred tons in all will be used by this company. Local teamsters are now engaged in hauling this material out to the ditch. A staff of fifteen men is at present engaged handling and unloading supplies at Stowe station, but this number will be more than doubled when the work is in full swing.

Many farmers are of the opinion that as wheat is lowering in value from day to day, by the time the coming crop is harvested the price will be hovering in the neighborhood of the 60 cents per bushel mark. There never was a time, however, when wheat should be bringing $2.00 per bushel as now. Farmers have been up against a hard proposition for several years, nearly all are entered on the books of both merchants and bankers in large sums and creditors naturally look for a settlement of outstanding accounts. But can this be done should wheat be selling at the low figure of 60c as many predict?

An accident that might quite easily have resulted seriously happened to Mr. F. Crowson and Mrs. Harvey upon their return to Macleod last Monday morning from the Kootenai. While coming down a steep coulee the horse shied off the trail at sight of a steam grading outfit, upsetting the rig and throwing both occupants heavily to the ground. Mrs. Harvey received a very severe shaking up while Mr. Crowson was cut about the head as well as receiving other injuries of a more or less serious nature. The victims of the accident were hurried to the Macleod General Hospital, where

Mr. Crowson is resting quietly at time of writing.

Fruit is plentiful in the Kootenays this season.

P. Burns, of the P. Burns Co., Calgary, was a business visitor in Macleod this week.

There will be a community (religious) service in the big Chautauqua Tent on Sunday evening at 7.30.

Mrs. C. D. Murphy and daughter Gertrude, of Lethbridge, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Charlton returned home early Monday last after a two week's visit spent in and around Nelson, B.C.

George Beattie commenced harvesting operations on August 4th. Mr. Beattie reports his yield to be excellent.

A Dominion Tree Planting Car will make a tour of Southern Alberta, starting Monday, August 7th, at Seven Persons. The itinerary will conclude on September 16th.

The recent rains will have a tendency to fill out the wheat and incidentally, so it is claimed by optimistic farmers, add at least five bushels an acre to the yield.

Billy Wilkinson is in great demand by outside parties entering the state of married bliss, he having acted as best man on two occasions during the week.

Mrs. Harvey, wife of Col. Harvey, V.C., left Macleod on Thursday, August 3, to join her husband in Aldershot, England, where he is instructor, and where they will remain during his term of engagement with the British government.

Fire breaking out in one of the large stables at the police barracks brought out the fire brigade on the run at about 10:30 this morning. The building was badly gutted. Origin of the fire at present is unknown. The water pressure was excellent.

The Blood Indian horse thieves, Muskrat and Undermouse, who appeared at the Cardston courthouse a month ago on the charge of stealing horses, will be again tried at Cardston next week on the same charge, but for a different horse. On June 12, Constable Majorison brought to Cardston a stolen horse, from Montana, but no owner was found until last night. Mr. Belloby of Macleod, claimed the horse, which is now in the Cardston livery barn. Now that the owner is found, the trial will be held, making the second appearance of the "Bloods" inside of a month's time.—Cardston despatch.

The Local Council of Women wish to tender thanks to those who so kindly aided them in their efforts to provide a rest tent for women and children attending the fair. Mr. E. McNeil of Standoff furnished the tent; Mr. Bell of the Barracks put the tent up and took it down; Mr. Pringle carted the cribs, cots, carpets, rugs and Mr. Swinerton supplied the ice for the drinking water. Thanks are also due the ladies who loaned the furniture and toys and who were in attendance during the days of the fair. The tent was much appreciated, 110 making use of it. The babies were well looked after by Mrs. Horner and Miss Maunsell.

The northern members of the Legislative Assembly to the number of 23 left town shortly after 8 o'clock Wednesday morning on their tour of the southern portion of the district. At the banquet tendered in their honor last night at the Silver Grill, the members of the party referred in glowing terms to the wonderful fields of grain they had inspected on Tuesday in close proximity to Macleod. It is regrettable that the party could not

The Hutterite Brethren, at Stand Off, are well along with cutting operations, having finished barley and oat cutting, and are now proceeding with the harvesting of their wheat crop. The Brethren report excellent yields throughout their colony.

An overturned buzz-wagon, a few minor damages resulting therefrom, was the prelude to a mild form of jollification, occurring near the McKenzie bridge Wednesday afternoon. "Hiram" smothered the troubled spirit after one or two jarring discords.

PRINTING BY WIRELESS

A penniless engineer has invented a device for printing by means of wireless.

He is a Hungarian named Szabo, and his process is quite a simple one. The "copy" to be printed is set up in columns in the sending apparatus, and the wireless waves convey a similar impression to the receiver. The impression can also be sent by electricity along ordinary telegraph wires.

The inventor gave a lecture to a party of scientists in the workhouse where he is living—for he is entirely without means.

He claims that his machine will enable newspapers to be printed at the same moment all over the world without making use of the post or telegraph.

"What goes up must come down," as the boy said when he threw the brick, but the railway workers do not think so.
